

Take look at the texts below. They all have comparative and superlative adjectives.

In the UK, where's the nearest beach to your home?

We live in central England, so it's not so easy to get to a beach. Probably the closest beach is Weston-Super-Mare, but I think you need a car to get there. I went there with some friends last year, but there was lots of litter around, so I didn't think it was the cleanest beach in the world, but it was OK. Somebody told me that the best beaches are in Cornwall, but I also heard that they are also the most crowded.

What's the nicest place you've been to in the UK so far?

Well the most interesting place for me was Edinburgh. The old buildings are amazing, and the people are some of the friendliest I've ever met. So, I think Edinburgh with its wonderful old castle is the nicest place I've been to. I would also like to go to the Highlands in Scotland and see the tallest mountain in the UK, although I heard that it's the coldest and wettest place to go.

What is your worst experience of the UK so far?

Luckily, I haven't had too many negative experiences, but I do have one that I don't like to think about. Earlier this year, my husband and I needed to get to Gatwick Airport near London. We looked at coach tickets online and the cheapest ones we found were just £5 each. However, the coach didn't go directly from Birmingham to Gatwick. It first went to six other airports in England before finally reaching Gatwick. We were stuck on that coach for 11 hours. That was definitely the worst experience. It was certainly the longest coach trip I had ever been on!
